

Climate Change Theatre Action 2025

Guidelines

The Basics

- WHAT: CCTA 2025 is a worldwide festival of short plays about the climate crisis that brings communities together and encourages them to take local and global action on climate. It is a collaboration between the Arts & Climate Initiative and the Centre for Sustainable Practice in the Arts.
- WHEN: September 19 - December 20, 2025
- WHERE: Wherever you are
- WE PROVIDE: A collection of 50 short plays from all over the world. Ten are new plays written under the theme “The Time Is Now,” and 40 are our greatest hits from the last decade. We also provide guidelines and resources to help make your event effective and unique, organizational and marketing support, and a lot of enthusiasm!
- YOUR CONTRIBUTION: You agree to organize and present an event between September 19 and December 20, 2025, using at least one play from our collection. Your event can be anything from an intimate reading to a fully staged performance, and from a podcast to a film adaptation. (Please note: We are not able to provide funding for events.)
- ACTION: We ask you to include an action – educational, social, or political/civic – as part of your event. We define “action” as something that happens in addition to the theatrical experience, that aims to connect and/or galvanize people. It may involve the scientific community, other departments within a university, local environmental organizations, etc.

The Plays

- Out of respect for the playwrights, please do not share the dropbox link you received in an email. Access to the plays is granted to you and your team only.
- You may not make any changes to the plays without prior permission from the playwrights.
- Plays may be translated into other languages.
- Plays may be presented royalty-free during the CCTA 2025 season only (September 19-December 20, 2025).

Production

- There's no need to adhere to the traditional presentation format. Get out on the street, perform on a farm, partner with a local radio station, stage an event in your friend's living room or backyard... anything and everything is possible.
- Make it unique! Design your event to reflect your aesthetic and engage your community. We ask that you use at least one play from our collection but you're free to add additional material by local playwrights/artists.
- Choose a unique title for your event. Please mention that it is part of Climate Change Theatre Action 2025 and include our logo. (This must appear on all publicity material.) Two versions of the logo are saved in the dropbox with the plays.
- The names of the playwrights featured in your event must be listed in your program (if you have one).
- If you have the technology, consider livestreaming your event on your favorite platform.
- As you put your event together, think sustainably.

Publicity

- All events will be listed on our website. You'll receive a link later on asking you to upload information about your event.
- Reach out to local press and media. The more noise we make, the more impact we'll have.
- If you post on Instagram, add @artsnclimate as a collaborator so we can help you spread the word.
- Like and follow the Arts & Climate Initiative (FB, IG) and the Centre for Sustainable Practice in the Arts (FB, IG), and subscribe to our YouTube channel. Use #ClimateChangeTheatreAction or #CCTA2025.
- DOCUMENT YOUR EVENT. This is important! Take photos and/or videos, tag us, and send us copies. These will help us sing your praises and build momentum for future Actions.

Feedback

- Shortly after your event has taken place, we'll contact you and ask for feedback. It would be useful to have a rough idea of how many artists participated, how many people attended, any action you organized, and your general sense of how it went.

Resources

Because this is a Climate Change Theatre Action, we urge you to think about an action – educational, social, or political/civic – that can be integrated into your event. We define “action” as something that happens in addition to the theatrical experience, that aims to connect and/or activate people.

Examples of actions from previous years:

- Hosting a conversation about local climate impacts and possible solutions
- Inviting representatives from local environmental or climate justice organizations to talk about their initiatives
- Raising money for environmental organizations, food banks, or tree planting initiatives
- Hosting a conversation with scientists and/or sustainability experts
- Writing to local government representatives asking them to support climate policies
- Partnering with other departments on a university campus, or presenting an event as part of a larger conference on sustainability and climate change
- Sharing local sustainability guidelines (for example, NYC's Zero Waste Plan)
- Pledging to embrace a plant-based diet

Other ideas might include:

- Presenting your event in a place where the audience would not normally be exposed to this topic (faith communities, schools, veterans groups, your mother's living room, etc.)
- Organizing to put pressure on your university/municipal government/employer/board of directors/etc. to divest from fossil fuels
- Creating a group that meets on an ongoing basis to share ideas about taking action on climate change (or joining an existing group, like your local 350.org, Sunrise Movement, Zero Hour, and Fridays For Future chapters)
- Implementing Drawdown solutions

In addition, we have compiled a series of links that you might find useful as you plan your event. These are meant to provide inspiration as well as equip you with references and tools. Many of these links will take you to US-based organizations. Please let us know if there are resources in your country that we can add to this list.
